INTRODUCING BERTHA

Bertha, a legendary Droimeann cow from Sneem in Co. Kerry died in 1993. At 48 years of age she was recorded as being the worlds oldest cow, having given birth to an eye-bulging 39 calves over her lifetime. To immortalise her memory, we have brought her back in spirit – literally!

Using whey alcohol from the local dairy farmers here in Cork, together with our own natural well water and an interesting mix of foraged and sustainably sourced botanicals, we have hand-crafted a multi-award winning gin that is smooth, textured and distinctively flavoured.

TASTING NOTES

Nose

Jaunty juniper leads, followed quickly by the spicy and warming notes of cardamom, cumin and sweet citrus. The complexity of Bertha is evident and enthralling. She demands to be tasted.

Palate

Our whey alcohol base comes to the fore on the palate. Like a conductor of an orchestra, she holds and releases the different notes to maximum effect. Effortlessly smooth from the start, sweet citrus and juniper are joined in a warming motherly caress of cumin, clove and cardamom. The generous nature of the spirit washes over the palate, finishing in a gentle spice-tinted heat that delivers a considered murmur of approval from your taste buds.

We are so happy with the complexity and smoothness of Bertha, that we really enjoy savouring her character by simply adding a splash of water, and sipping her as a digestif.

She works very well with a good quality tonic, where her spice forward character lends herself to traditional citrus garnishes.

One of the great tests of a gin is how they perform in a martini. Bertha, stirred for 60 seconds with ice and a suggestion of vermouth, poured into a chilled glass with a simple zest garnish delivers a gloriously smooth and precise cocktail experience.
